Executive Interview

Strategic Global Investments CEO Andrew Fellner

I recently reported on a company called Strategic Global Investments, Inc. (OTCPK:STBV). This company has two distinct areas of interest, which include online & mobile marketing media for B2B clients, and has also entered into the recreational & medical marijuana industry through its Bearpot, Inc. subsidiary. The company's stock has been seeing trading volume increase over the last few weeks and after posting my last article, I had the pleasure of actually interviewing the CEO, Andrew Fellner, personally. This is what he had to say:

1. In a few words, can you explain what the company does or is planning to do?

Strategic Global (OTCPK:STBV) operates within two separate focal points, although they compliment each other extremely well.

We are engaged in providing our customers with various opportunities to use the internet to provide on-demand information or advertising to targeted audiences. We do this in three ways: we produce informational content videos for customers, we permit customers to use our studios to produce their own informational content videos and we provide a website where our subscribers can make available live, streaming video for their potential customers or others they wish to reach. We produce internet content, largely taped video shows, in our studios in San Diego, California and utilize our content management system ("CMS"). This content is then made available to the target audience directly through our internet website WazilloMedia.com (the "Media Site") or through a link on our customer's website.

We also have the ability, through our Wazillo.com website (the "Streaming Site"), to show potential customers of our subscribers an online network of streaming video from webcams located at restaurants, bars, nightclubs and similar venues, which shows these potential customers what is happening in those venues on a real time basis.

Our second point of focus and the most recent that we have achieved as a company is a marijuana cultivations center. This recent acquisition may be the new focus for investors but the company is working on much more than just "growing pot".

We are also focusing on marketing merchandise and combining our video expertise with the MJ growing business.

2. What Direction do you see your industry headed toward?

The industry for mobile apps as well as recreational marijuana is growing by the minute so we hope that more states get on board and we are able to expand our business exponentially within the next 3-5 years.

3. What are the key risks the company faces right now?

The key risks that the company faces right now are really related to human resources and making sure that all of our new employees are hard working and responsible. As far as the market goes we are doing great and I couldn't be happier with the volume in the stock.

4. What projects are you currently looking to begin and/or complete?

As I had mentioned before we are very excited for our most recent acquisition, which was announced only on Feb 20th. You can also find the PR on OTCmarkets.com or through Yahoo!Finance.

5. What are the current challenges you're facing that could prevent or slow progress from this/these project(s)?

Progress from this point forward is going to be determined on two things; The growth of the users on our mobile app and of course the number of states that are going to recreationally legalize marijuana. With the diversity of projects we have I'd say that this is the best place the company has ever been in.

6. If all goes as planned, how much revenue does the company anticipate generating from this/these project(s)?

I don't want to give out a number just yet but once the final paperwork is complete and all licenses and permits are obtained on the acquisition we will be generating revenue.

7. Where do you think the most significant growth will occur for the company over the next 3-6 months?

The largest amount of growth that we will see in the next 3-6 months for STBV will surely be in the growing and distributing of medical and recreational marijuana. As more states move for legalization we will also expand and have several other facility acquisition targets in mind. We are also very close to signing an on-line merchandising operation that will bring revenue and new interest to the company.

8. What are you doing to capitalize on the company's strengths and minimize the company's weakness?

Right now we're focusing on the development of our latest acquisition of Bearpot Inc. We're actively searching for marijuana business in the US and Canada that will be compatible with our current incubation and development platform. The market is so fresh and yet already has such a large existing customer base; it's hard not to get involved. However entry into the market needs to be done correctly the first time around. With that said, we would look to mitigate risk through proper planning and through making strategic partnerships with businesses looking for a quality product to sell.

Conclusion

Andy went on to express his excitement for the months to come. I was honored to be able to sit with him and discuss all of his new endeavors. He was very positive when discussing what he has planned for 2014 and most importantly, he was very grateful for his current shareholders supporting the company.

The article in my opinion could have been strengthened with some discussion on how STBV will be financing their new endeavors. Does the company need to raise capital and how will that be accomplished? What is the company's position on dilution of the current A/O?

Author's reply » I believe the first part of your question can be partly addressed from the company's press release this morning. As to the second part, that would certainly be a great question for the company.
